Watch the show below:In his latest series of reports on the world's worst wars and conflicts, Seymour Hersh reports on an ongoing Saudi war in Yemen. The Saudi military, which has fought a brutal war against Iran's Houthis since 2014, is bombing schools for teachers and education leaders, schools that are home to tens of thousands of Yemenis (a majority Shi'ite). The country's children have faced appalling conditions of malnutrition, illiteracy and sexual violence, making up a significant share of the fighting. The war on Yemen has been financed and run with America's help, with funding largely going to Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates (UAE) and with weapons going to Qatar and Turkey. Yemen has suffered through a humanitarian disaster, but the Saudi war has also damaged the country's economy and contributed to the rise of the extreme right.. Download.. Yemen in the face of a war The UN reports that since 2011 around 200,000 Yemeni homes have been either destroyed (an average of 70%) or badly damaged (e.g. more than half of villages destroyed; more than half of schools completely destroyed or severely damaged), as part of a campaign of "war crimes, including torture, destruction, sexual violence, extrajudicial executions, arbitrary arrest and detention" against people deemed rebels. In October 2013, the UN Security Council declared that "the Houthis and the military leadership of Yemen are responsible for a severe humanitarian crisis in Yemen," and in November signed a statement calling for peace and humanitarian talks with the country.. [Photo by Anais Karamat] In May 2015, a Saudi attack killed around 10,000 students and teachers at Shifa Al-Arish in southern Yemen. The attack was linked to an attempt to remove Yemeni President Abd Rabbuh Mansour Hadi, a strong opponent of the Saudi attack and the Saudi war agenda. Saudi Arabia's aggression was condemned worldwide, with UN Secretary General Antonio Guterres calling it "a terrible day for humanity" during his speech at World Food Day in September 2015.. A sign reads: "Schools in Sanaa, Yemen." Yemen is where most of the world's displaced children and their families are found.. With the additions of players such as Fletcher Cox, Jason Peters, and Mychal Kendricks, I think it is safe to say that the Eagles have the depth they need to compete in 2017. The Eagles are still very much in a position to compete in the NFC East for a division title, but if they can hold on to a fourth straight playoff berth or better, I think their playoff aspirations will become more realistic..
